

The iterative function has $O(n)$ because it goes through one for loop the length of the list.
The recursive function has $O(n)$ because it recursively goes through the list twice, making it $2n$, but since you drop constants, it's $O(n)$